SATURDAY EVENING, MAY 19, 1866.

[COMMUNICATED. MUSICAL GOSSIP-FOREIGN. PARIS.-Rossini recently gave a dioner at Passy to M'Abbe Liszt, after the performance of his Messe at St. Eustache, and Rossini, as usual, made a few jokes on the occasion, which lokes made the rounds of the Salons and Boulevards. One was as follows:

Said one convive present to Lizgt, "The Credo in your mass is the fairest flower of your garland, M' L' Abbe." "Yes," added Rossi ni, "in fact a fleur de Lizgt."

Meyerbeer's opera "Africaine" is written so high nobody can sing it, so no Paris manager will accept it, unless a fourth-story voice can he found.

The new Opera House in Paris is rapidly approaching completion. Viewed from the Bouleyard des Capucines, which is in front of it, the first objects which attract the eye are two circular wings which are reached by a circular terrace in the Italian style, so gently graded as to allow carriages and horses to ascend them and land their passengers under the portices of the rings. The Imperial carriage way to the Emperor's box is in the left wing. The staircases from this portico lead to the Emperor's private seloor, to the dressng rooms, to the saloons of the Lids de Camp, and to the Imperial box. There will be a telegraph office in this wing in communication with all the capitals of Europe, and c: Council Chamber, so that if an important telegram comes during the performance of any opera, a Cabinet Council may be immediately essembled in the opera house itself. Truly a French idea. The wing to the right is for the pubscribers to the grand opera; it is sufficiently enter its portico together—it opens into a large vestibule which communicates with the grand staircase. The whole hall is profusely decorated with marble, bronzes, gilding and sculpcures. Every box has a saloon which is an ele-cent, comfortable, well lighted, well aired and large parlor. There is an immense promenade saloon, which has at each end a small saloon Thich looks on the boulevard, and betwee these mall saloons there is a porch called LOGGIA, which is built for a summer promenade for those spectators who may wish to stretch their egs between the acts.

The canon of proportion in stage construcion being that the depth of the stage should be equal to twice its width at the curtain, the stage of the new Opera House is sixty feet deep, and it may be made seventy-eight feet without much trouble, and even as deep as one hundred and fifty feet by removing some of the inside partitions. The perpendicular depth of the cellar beneath the stage is so great as to allow any scene-even a cathedral or a mountain-to be lowered in one piece, without rolling or dislocating it, instantly, down the trap door. All the scenes are suspended from the roof, and they are moved on rollers or moveable rails. The scenes are balanced with the utmost exactness-a child can move them in any direction. The width of the stage, from wall to wall, is 168 feet-large enough to contain the scenery for twelve operas ready for use. Five hundred and sixty workmen are daily engaged, of whom three hundred are stone cutters. The stone cutters yard occupies 120,000 feet of ground. It is provided with railways, and eight steam engines of 20 horse power. The stones used are brought from the department L'Yonne. They are enormous, many weighing 20.000 pounds.

VIENNA.—In a performance of the "The Huguenots," the Prima Donna, Mlle. Liebhart, could not quite succeed with some of her passages in her part. Some gentleman in the parquet dared to hiss; the lady became so digusted with such unkind treatment, she retired from the stage. After some time waiting, the tenor prevailed upon her to re-appear. But, behold, she was in tears—she wept and wept, till the public increased their rapturous applause to an indescribable pitch. The Opera House will contain 3,000 persons, and has 430 stalls and 98 boxes. The imperial private box is situated on the right of the stage, and the Grand Ducal private box on the lett, while the Imperial state box is in the middle of the house.

The well known painter and writer upon music, Herr Carl Gross-Athanasius-lately discovered, at Vienna, a highly interesting portrait of Beethoven, with his autograph.-It represents the composer as about twenty, and dates probably from the time of his first stay at Vienna, in 1792. It is a charming miniature. Beethoven is easily recognized by his fine forehead and prominent cheek bones. He wears his hair in powder, and is dressed in a greyish green coat. His hand is pressing on his breast. The portrait is very spirited, and was painted probably by Kreuzingas or Hickl, and it was in all likelihead a present to a fair and it was, in all likelihood, a present to a fair pupil, or some other favorite beauty, for at the back are the words, in the composer's hand: "L. Van Beethoven." The two "v's" end very characteristically in a long flourish, but the writing is unmistakably like that of his later LANCELOT.

TALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER has proved itself to be the most perfect preparation for the hair ever offered to the public. It is a vegetable compound and contains no injurious properties whatever.

It will restore gray hair to its original color.

It will keep the hair from falling out.

It cleanes the scalp and makes the hair soft,

lustrous and silken.
It is a splendid hair dressing.

The superphosphate yet offered to the farmer, possessing all the activity of Peruvian Guano, but being far more durable in its effects.

It contains a large amount of animal matter in a highly concentrated form, which, combined with its soluble-bone phosphate of lime, cannot fail to render it very valuable as a fertilizer.—Notwithstanding we believe it to be the best super-phosphate in the market, yet, by a process peculiar in its manufacture, whereby the expenses are lessened, we are enabled to sell it very low, with a liberal discount to dealers.
